

'THE ROAD NOT TAKEN'

Two roads diverged in a yellow wood,
And sorry I could not travel both
And be one traveler, long I stood And looked down one as far as I could To where it bent in the undergrowth;

Then took the other, as just as fair,
And having perhaps the better claim,
Because it was grassy and wanted wear;
Though as for that the passing there Had worn them really about the same,

And both that morning equally lay In leaves no step had trodden black.
Oh, I kept the first for another day!
Yet knowing how way leads on to way,
I doubted if I should ever come back.

I shall be telling this with a sigh
Somewhere ages and ages hence:
Two roads diverged in a wood, and I—I took the one less traveled by,
And that has made all the difference

(Robert Frost, 1874–1963)

According to some sources, Frost wrote the poem to 'tease' his friend Edward Thomas. Frost and Thomas would go on many walks with the promise of seeing some rare and beautiful sights but unfortunately the paths they chose did not reveal these sights. Frost was amused with Thomas' inability to be satisfied with the choice of path they took.
